Former Deputy Secretary of State for New York & Jersey City Resident to Join Fulop Administration as Newest Deputy Mayor Overseeing Economic Development

Mayor Fulop Continues to Grow Senior Staff with Top Tier Professionals from Across the Region

JERSEY CITY - Mayor Steven M. Fulop announced today that the former Deputy Secretary of State for New York and Jersey City resident, Marcos Vigil, is joining the administration as the City's newest Deputy Mayor, as the mayor continues to bring top tier professionals to Jersey City government to implement his vision for creating the best mid-size city in America.

Mr. Vigil has served for the past four years as the Deputy Secretary of State for New York in the administration of Governor Andrew Cuomo. During his tenure with New York State, Mr. Vigil headed the Division of Consumer Protection and represented the Secretary of State as Chair of the New York State Real Estate Board, a regulatory body overseeing real estate professionals.

“We are continuing to develop a team of top tier professionals from across the region who can execute our vision for developing Jersey City into the best mid-size city in America,” said Mayor Fulop. “With his experience in New York, Marcos will successfully build upon our current growth by working to attract new businesses to Jersey City, expanding development and real estate, and improving government services.”

As Deputy Mayor, Mr. Vigil will oversee economic development and real estate, working closely with the Department of Housing, Economic Development and Commerce as well as the Jersey City Redevelopment Agency. He will also collaborate on policies related to government operations. A resident of Jersey City, Mr. Vigil will earn a salary of $110,000.

Jersey City currently leads the state with residential construction and has the most development underway in the City's history, with 6,000 units under construction and another 18,000 approved.

At the New York Department of State, Mr. Vigil oversaw six agencies with revenue generation of more than $70 million annually. Those divisions included the Divisions of Corporations and Licensing Services, which licenses and regulates 32 different occupations across New York. Mr. Vigil was also instrumental in streamlining operations that lead to greater efficiencies and reduced operating costs, and will work in Jersey City to continue the mayor's agenda of streamlining services and creating greater efficiencies.
